THE FAITHFUL SON.

'My tale is simple, and of humble birth
A tribute of respect to real worth.'

'You are too parsimonious,' said Mr, Dana to one of his clerks, as they were together in the counting house one morning—'give me leave to say that you do not dress sufficiently genteel to appear as a clerk in a fashionable store.'

Henry's face was suffused with a deep blush, and a tear trembled on his manly cheek.

'Did you not know that your salary was sufficient to provide more genteel habliments,' continued Mr Dana, 'I would increase it.'

'My salary is sufficient, amply sufficient, sir,' replied Henry in a voice choked with that proud independence of feeling which poverty had not been able to divest him of. His employer noticed the agitation, and immediately changed the subject.

Mr Dana was a man of immense wealth and ample benevolence, he was a widower, and had but one child, a daughter who was the pride of his declining years. She was not as beautiful as an angel, or as perfect as Venus, but the goodness, the innocence, the intelligence of her mind shone in her countenance, and you had but to become acquainted with her to admire and love her. Such was Caroline Dana, when Henry became an inmate of her father's abode.

No wonder, then that he soon loved her, with deep and devoted affection, and reader, had you known him. you would not wondered that that love was soon returned, for their souls were congenial, they were cast in virtue's purest mould—and although their tongues never gave utterance to what they felt, yet the language of their eyes told plainly to be mistaken. Henry was the soul of honor and although he perceived that he was not indifferent to Caroline, the passion in his bosom was stifled. 'I must not endeavor to win her young and artless heart. I am penniless, and cannot expect that her father will ever consent to her union, he has ever treated me with kindness, and I will not be ungrateful.' Thus he reasoned, and thus he heroically endeavored to subdue what he considered an ill-fated passion. Caroline had many suitors, and some who were fully worthy of her, but she refused all their overtures with a gentle but decisive firmness. Her father wondered at her conduct, and yet would not thwart her inclinations.

He was in the decline of life, and wished to see her happily settled before he quit the stage of existence. It was long ere he suspected that young Henry was the cause of her indifference to others. The evident pleasure she took in hearing him praised. the blush on her cheek whenever her eyes met, all served to convince the old gentleman, who had not forgotten that he was once young himself, that they took more than common interest in each other's welfare.

Thus satisfied, he forebore making any remarks upon the subject, but was not as displeased at the supposition as the penniless Henry would have imagined.

Henry had now been about a year in his employ. Mr Dana knew nothing of his family, but his strict integrity, his irreproachable morals, his pleasing manners, all conspired to make them esteem him highly. He was proud of Henry, and wished him to appear in dress, as well as manners, as respectable as any one. He had often wondered at the scantiness of his wardrobe, for although he dressed with the most scrupulous regard to neatness, his clothes were almost threadbare. Mr Dana did not think this proceeded from a niggardly disposition, and he determined to broach the subject, and if possible, ascertain the real cause, this he did in the manner we have related.

Soon after this conversation took place, Mr Dana left home on business. As he was returning and riding through a beautiful village, he alighted at the door of a cottage, and requested a drink. The mistress with an ease and politeness that convinced him that she had not always been the humble cottager, invited him to walk in. He accepted the invitation, and here a scene of poverty and neatness presented itself such as he had never before witnessed. The furniture which consisted of no more than was absolutely necessary, was so exqnisitely clean that it gave charms to poverty, and cast an air of comfort all round. A venerable looking old man, who had not seemed to notice the entrance of Mr Dana sat leaning on his staff, his clothes were clean and whole, but so patched that you could scarcely told which had been the original piece.

'That is your father I presume?' said Mr Dana, addressing the lady.

'It is sir.'

'He seems to be quite aged.'

'He is in his eighty third year, he has survived all his children except myself.'

'You have once seen better days.'

'I have. My husband was wealthy, but false friends have ruined him, he endorsed notes to a great amount, which stripped us nearly all our property, and one misfortune followed another, until we were reduced to poverty. My husband did not long survive his losses, and two of my children soon followed him.'

'Have you any remaining children?'

'I have one, and he is my only support. My health is so feeble I cannot do much, and my father being blind, needs great attention. My son conceals from me the amount of his salary, but I am convinced he sends me nearly all, if not the whole amount of it.

'Then he is not at home with you?'

'No sir, he is clerk for a wealthy merchant in Philadelphia.'

'Pray what is your sons name?'

'Henry Whitman.'

'Henry Whitman!' exclaimed Mr Dana 'why he is my clerk! I left him at my house not a fortnight since.'

Here followed a succession of inquires which evinced an anxiety and a solitude that a mother alone can feel, to all of which Mr Dana replied to her satisfaction.

'You know our Henry!' said the old man raising his head from his staff. 'well sir, then you know as worthy a lad as ever lived, God bless him. He will bless him for his goodness to his poor old grandfather,' he added in a tremulous voice, while the tears chased each other down his cheeks. 'He is a worthy fellow to be sure, said Mr D. rising and placing a well filled purse in the hands of the old man. 'He is a worthy young man, and shall not want friends, be assured.'

He left the cottage.

'Noble boy,' said he mortality as he was riding leisurely along, ruminating on his interview, noble boy, 'he shall not want wealth to enable him to distribute happiness. I believe he loves my girl. and if he does, he shall have her, and all my property in the bargain.'

Filled with this project, and determined if possible to ascertain the true state of their hearts, he entered the breakfast room next morning after his arrival home, Caroline was alone.

So Henry is about to leave us to go to England and try his fortune,' he careless ly observed.

'Henry about to leave us said Caroline, dropping the work she held in her hand—'about to leave us, and going to England!' she added in a tone which evinced the deepest interest.

To be sure, but what if he is my child?'

Nothing sir, nothing—only I thought we should be rather lonesome,' she replied turnrng away to hide the teare she could not suppress.

'Tell me, Caroline, said Mr. Dana tenderly embracing her, tell me— do you love Henry, You know I wish your happiness my child. I have ever treated you with kindness, and you have never untill now kept any-thing hid from your father.'

'Neither will I now, she replied, hiding her face in his bosom. I do most sincerely esteem him, but do not for the world tell him so, for he has never said it was returned.

The daughter was left alone

Henry, said he. entering the counting house, you expect to visit the country shortly, do you—I beleive you told me so?'

'Yes, sir, in about four weeks.'

'If it would not be too inconvenient? replied Mr, Dana, I should like to have you defer it a week or two longer at least.'

'It will be no inconvenience sir, and if it would oblige you' I will with pleasure.'

'It will most certainly oblige me, for Caroline is to be married in about six weeks, and I would not miss having you attend the wedding.

Caroline to be married sir, said Henry starting as if by an electric shock. Caroline to be married Is it possible!'

'To be sure it is, but what is there so wonderful about that?

'Nothing sir, only it was rather sudden rather unexpected that's all.

'It is rather sudden to be sure, but I am an old man and wish to see her have a protector—and as the man is well worthy of her, I see no use in waiting any longer and I am very glad that you can stay to the wedding.

I cannot stay sir.—indeed I cannot! replied Henry, forgetting what he had previously said.

You cannot stay, replied Mr. Dana,—why you just said you would.'

'Yes, sir. but business requires my presence in the country, and I must go.

But you said it would not put you to any inconvenience, and that you would wait with pleasure.'

'Command me in any thing else sir, but in that request I cannot oblidge you, said Henry rising and walking the floor with rapid strides.

Poor fellow he had thought his passion subdued, but when he though that Caroline was so soon, so irrevocably to become another's, the latent spark burst forth in. to an unextinguishable flame, and he found it in vain to endeavor to conceal his emetion.

The old Gentleman regarded him with a look of earnestness.

'Henry tell me, frankly do you love my girl?

'I will be candid with you. sir, replied Henry nnconscious that his agitation had betrayed him'—

Had I a fortune such as she merits and as you sir, have a right to expect I should esteem myself the happiest of men could I gain her love,'

'Then, she is yours, cried the delighted old man, say not a word about poverty my boy— true worth is better than riches. I was only trying you Henry—and Caroline will never be married to any one other but yourself.

The transition from dispair to happiness was great, For a moment Henry remained silent but his looks spoke volumes At last he said.

I scorn to deceive you sir. I am poorer than what you suppose, I have a feeble mother and a grandfather who are.

I know it—I know it all, Henry, said Mr Dana, interrupting him, I know the reason of your parsimony as I called it and I honor you for it, it was that which first put it into my head to give you Caroline so she shall be yours and my God bless you both' They separated.

Shortly after this conversation, Henry avowed his love to Caroline and solicited her hand and it is needless to say that he did not solicit in vain. Caroline would have defered their union nutil the ensuing spring but her father was inexorable. He supposed he would have to own a falsehood he said and they would willingly have him shoulder two, but it was too much, entirely so, and he had told Henry that she was going to be married in six weeks—and he could not forfeit his word.

'But perhaps, added he, apparently recollecting himself, and turning to Henry, we shall have to defer it after all, for you have important bussiness in the country about that time.

'Be mercifull sir,' said Henry, smiling, I did not wish to witness the sacrifice of my own happiness.

'I am merciful sir, and for that reason would not wish to put you to the inconvenience of staying— You said you would willingly oblidge me, but you could not indeed you could not.

'You have once been goung sir, said Henry.

'I know it—I know it.' replied he laughing heartily, but I am afraid too many of us old folks forget it—however ,if you can postpone your journey, I suppose we must have a wedding.'

We have only to add, that the friends of Henry were sent for, and the nuptails solemnized at the appointed time, and that blessed with the filial love of Henry and Caroline, the old people passed the remainder of their days in peace and happiness.

THIRTIETH CONGRESS.

We have reached our last minute, for something to say of their Honors either general or speciial, and see nothing excepting that they have removed several of our friends.

We are much grieved to part with them particularly Mr Medary, a man of great kindness. May he meet with friends where ever he goes!

"A NEW MORMON LIGN.

Some big humbug calling himself J. J. Strang, is very strongly coming the Mormon over some folks out on beaver island, in Lake Michigan.—Strang is the legtimate successor of Joe Smith defunct, and is said to be death on a rough and tumble fight or a game of ten pins. He is six feet high, broad shouldered, and kicks like a jackass. In short he possesses all the qualifications of a mormon prophet, The Gazette published at Davenport, Iowa, says:

Beaver Island, in Lake Michigan, has become the chosen spot of the Mormons; under J. J. Strang. The island contains about forty square miles, and has been surveyed by Government, but is not yet in market. Some eight or ten squatters on it have been brought up by Strang, who has issued his orders that the mormons immediately take up their line of march to their new place of abode. Strang claims to be the Heaven appointed successor of Joe Smith. Voree, Wisconsin, his present place of residence contains about 1,000 of his followers, His power is almost unlimited. By a bull of excommunication, he recently cut from official standing in the church, his notorious contemporary, John C Bennett. The Revelle, the organ of the Strangites at Voree, speaking of this newly fledged prophet says, there is not his equal on this earth for patience, faith, prudence, wisdom, aptness to teach, and indefatigable perseverance. Poor, weak human nature. As the poet never said,—

Man's imposition upon man.
Makes countless thousands fools.*

Is there no remedy for the deplorable ignorance that shrouds our country? The millerites and these mormons, and abolitionists demonstrates the true character of the Church and state party, viz. the "gospel" spreading party."

* Through shame perhaps they have for the most part dropped this word, and call it "religious instruction." Of course they say anything but the truth.

They have laid the whole country—even to Texas, under contribution, to spread the gospel, for as they now say, "religions instruction," and lo! they have done so, and a pretty religion it is, ignorance, mormons, millerites, killers, bornburners, abolitionists, and mobs—all to get money, and with it get power. Witness this STRANG.

"His power is almost unlimited. By a bull of excommunication he recently cut from official standing in the church his nortorious cotemporary John C Bennett." The Reville, the organ of Strang says, "there is not his equal on this earth (!!!) for patience, wisdom, faith, prudence, &c. He has 1,000 followers." This is the upshot of all the "religious instructions," in money, for we never call this christianity religion—alas, to get money for which thousands are hung.

Is it not plain that if these 1,000 followers of Strang, were not degraded to the lowest debth of ignorance, they would be caught uniting with this stupid fanatic? This and mobs, and murders, and some other matters we might name, is what the people get for their money.

THE NATIONAL ERA.

We have introduced the subject of Strang, the imposter as evidence that the neglect of proper education has left an open door for all manner of deception, hypocricy, and knavery, under every guise, and at every point by which the man of ignorance is assailable by his crafty fellow-man, even to the victims of the assassin.

But of all the calamities to which ignorance subjects a man, or a nation TYRANNY is the worst. But to the point.

The dangerous design of a large body of people in the United States, who are bent upon having an established church in this country have resorted to every scheme they could invent to carry out their object, with little probability of speedy success, they have fallen upon a new plan, that is, to set up a number of presses, they being as we conjecture the Editors or managers and supporters, under cover, for it is hardly creditable that men of their standing, named as editors, should furnish the means.

Whether this be the case or not, the "liberty" papers, meaning the abolitionists, are a lamentable proof of the retrograde state of society, and the very opposite of liberty.

The writers are the last apology for common sense or common courtesy. In fact almost the whole of those we see are extracts from each others papers—forms a medley of insolent dictation, inconstency without point, or reason.

But the most prominent trait in their style is an unqualified dogmatical assurance viz.—

"One word in relation to the twaddling nonsense of the compromise, so called, of the Constitution, in relation to the extension of slavery."

"Democratic party? What gives it life? Its principles, nothing else. These principles teach us, as the very first and fundamental truth, that slavery is a curse, alike to the master and the slave."

And what of it? They are not accountable for it, can they not eat, and drink, and sleep as well as if those people never existed? No. Their hearts are too full of venom. They have an inbred hatred toward their fellow-man. Their blood thirsty disposition leaves no room for mercy, forbearance, or human kindness. like all fanatics, they hate peace, and everything that is good, witness their persecutions of the Quakers. They are always breeding strife, and calumnuating their neighbors.

Is slavery a greater curse than theives robbers, murderers incendiaries &c which swarm amongst themselves. The people of the South can with more justice say abolitionists are a curse to the country.

More—

"Freely boldly as our fathers of old they pronounce against the shuffling stilling frauds of the Syracuse Convention."

As for instance,

"Any one who makes an assertion of this kind must presume largely on the ignorance of the community."

Most true! Suppress knowledge, and then if any one dare to resist their arbilary will off with their head!

Freely, boldly as our fathers did of old!' We not be told this it is well known why these desendants of the pilgrim fathers celebrate the the landing of these fathers and particularly in New Orleans, and for the same reason ineigh so bitterly against the Colonization society for sending colored men to Liberia—This would deprive the party of its best troops.

NEW BOOKS & PAPERS.

We have received a splended volume, edited by W. Hickey Esq. It is a 12 mo. containing 497 pages; and called the CONSTITUTION, but contains a variety of useful information on public affairs, principally relating to Congress, and the Executive, in the shape of a journal, with tables of Presidential elections, and their principal transactions from 1789 to the present year 1847.

The most valuable portions of the work, or at least the most interesting to posterity, is an abridged correspondence between Gen. Washington, Messrs Jefferson and Franklin.

It is certainly the most valuable volume to a statesman we have seen from the facility it affords to references. But it is a compendium of facts that ought to be in every family in the United States.

It is printed in Philadelphia, and the best finished book (agreeably to our judgement) we ever saw.

The New Miscellany.

This is a pretty little book in octavo size.

"The New Miscellany, for Girls and Boys, or a companion for leisure hours. Is editdd by Miss Cornelia L. Tuthill, Philadelphia," and will "be published in Monthly Parts, each containing thirty two handsomely printed pages, illustrated by a large Frontispiece, and numerous small Engravings.

Each number will be complete in itself forming a distinct and separate book, and will contain an original Story two original Poems and other miscellaneous matter.

Price 12 cents per number or $1 50 per annum."

The engravings are very handsome, and the prose and poetry are entertaining and full of instruction. The title page is a literary curiosity, the letters being formed into capitals out of the girls and boys themselves, and are very pretty. Success to our sister.

The Flag of our Union.

We have received two numbers of this extraordinary paper. The proprietor of which Mr Gleason seems to have (struck upon a new path if we may so speak) to rouse the taste of the people from their iron lethergy, to that interchange of kindness and good feelings, which we have strayed since tracts and bigotry have gained the ascendency.

The uncommon genios of Ned Buntlin The auther of those stratling tales. 'The Black avenger, and the Red avenger, will perpetrate his Name to latest posterity.

The St Charles Hotel and the Dutchman.—Yesterday a rich scene took place in front of the St Charles. An honest dutchman, who had just arrived from the Netherlands, came up St Charles street, with his wife and daughter hanging on his arms. In coming in front of the splendid edifice already mentioned, he suddenly halted, and with his mouth wide open exclaimed to his 'vrow."

'Mine Gott, Elizabet, what a splend church."

'Hans,' said the wife catching him by the arm, 'does you tink dat ish a Luteran or a Cadolic church. It doeshent look much like de one, and den it looks a dell like de toder, and then it doeshent look much like de neder.'

'Stop mine vrow,' said old Hans, as he shook the ashes out of his wry necked pipe, 'I will go in an 'see what kind of a church it is!'

The old man went in and saw a motley crowd at the bar, rows of brilliant decanters filled with the choicest liquors, and one apparently enjoying himself. He rushed out in perfect horror, and cluching his wife by the arm said, in a trembling tone:

'Elishabet! Elishaqet! Mine Gott! You here how de savior once drive de money merchants out of de temples an all dat. And now come, Elishbet lesh go back to Yarmany, for here in New Orleans I find that dey sell schnapps in churches!'

The worthy pair went away fully expressed with the idea that the St. Charles was a place of other worship than that of Bacchus.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Now is the very nick of time to select and order your choice reading for the long evenings of the coming Winter, or to chose a chaste and intelligent Weekly Visitor the coming year.

We flatter ourself that one word of eulogy of a Family Newspaper that has won for itself in a few years, by its undeviating course of enterprise, Industry and Morality, a circulation altogether unprecedented in the annals of periodical Literature [60 000 Subscribers) and a reputation as the Model newspaper of America, would be quite supererogatory. It speaks for itself. The publisher would say, however that for the future, the same brilliant succession of Original Tales. Essays, sketches, Poems, &c. &c., that have rendered the Courier the exemplar of the Periodical Press, will be continued—interspersed, varied and enriched with.

Original Legends of the Revolution—Historical Sketches of the Drama Philosophical essays—Letters from abroad classic Biographies gems of the poets—graphic Letters from New York, Boston, &c.—Revolutionary poems—Pictorial illustrations, &c. &c.

Together with all the news gossip, and variety of ordinary Newspaper.

For publishing in the City of Washington DC a new political newspaper to be called

COMMON SENSE

The
Workingman's advocate.

Whether in peace or War workingmen are the main stay of civilization.

Labor is the great law of human existence.—Our first parent was a vine dresser—and the Commaud he received when driven forth from Paradise was the earth to obtain his bread by the sweat of his brow.

Labor is the life of Civilization. The Savage hunts or plunders to gain a subsistance which honest Labor would procure without harm to any living thing.

Labor is the source of capitol, land lies waste until the hand of industry sows the seed and reaps the harvest. Machinery is powerless un till enligutened labor gives it an impulse and then regulates its action. capitol is but a surplus of the earnings of labor, over what is needed for purposes subsistence and comfor.

Whether from necessary causes or not, capital has become divorced from labor, and acquired over it a power too often at war with its interests. It claims a consideration not yielded to labor, and even in this country, where institutions are founded upon the doctrine That the equal rights of all men, it has secured an undue influence over legislation, determined to a great extent, the policy of the two great political parties, and rendered a large portion of the Public Press subservient to its interests.

name, whig or Democrat, believing that the time is not distant when the producing Classes will understand the sycophavcy of the present day, Federalism under the Cloak of Democracy and whiggary in the disguise of Federalism both a combination of aristocracy which by intrigue manage to work their way into public life, and afterwards treat with scorn those who helped to place them snugly in power at rich salaries.

The Workingman has never been properly appreciated—labor, in all its calling, has always been treated as a mere implement of trade. The frugal Artizan has no encouragment in having his son instructed in the find chaste and beautiful taste of the machanic Arts notwithstanding he may be in posiestion of a Classical education, so very requisite to place him at the head of his profession or trade.

We desire to call upon all the Working Classes, to rally in their strength at the next Convention, and select men from the Plough handle and Work shop, only be sure you know who they are. Do not for a moment suppose that their vocation unfits them for public stations, it is all preposterous to suppose so many of our States men of the presen day who are supposed to be possessed of a high intellectual attainments, are still devoid of common sense as well as moral firmness. It requires good, firm common sense, to be a good and honest President, one that will look upon the masses and carry out their wishes, and not suppose that his possition is above those who placed him in it.

We have no exclusive claims in consequence of being farmers and mechanics—neither are we be scoffed at for gaining an honest support by labor, if we desire a briliant statesman, it is no hard matter to select one, subject to a convention, only let workingmans not forget to claims Seats in that Convention.

let the Workingmen, who hold the balance of power, look to their own rights and interest keeping an eye single to the measures of the Constitution.

CHARLES S. TYSON.

AN ACROSTIC.

There lies a bower of roses by Bendemers stream.'
On these roses enraptured the poet enclined.
But an Havana cigar is more fragrent I ween,
And inviting than bowers with roses entwined
Come then, come the bower where Tyson reside
Cotte and puff of the cares of your business driven,
O'er this bower the Geh us of smiprg—

Segars of the finest from Cuba's bright Isle,
None here can equal, they're wondrous rare;
Under luxuries so fragrant, each care you beguile.
For they fly with the smoke and vanish in air.
For, 'tis clear and unquestionable,' 'tis a genuine Cigar.

And wield and high the poets strain awoke,
Not cries of 'gathering,' but Havanna's smoke,
Dance gaily o'er the head, as light as ether float-

Content with small profits, he solicits a hand
Invites you to call, he's determined to please
Good Segars, good Tobacco, all of a good brand,
And at his establishment no one need sneeze,
Relying on friendship, disposed to be fair,
Solicits of custom a moderate share.

THE BEST OF THE WEEKLIES.

Meal's Saturday Gazette—New Volume.

Editeu by Joseph C. Neal, Esq., author of 'charcoal sketches,' Peter Ploddy and other odities, 'in town and about,' &c.

The subscribers have purchased the establishment of the Saturday Museum, propose to make it their basis of a new enterprise on an enlarged and liberal plan. The title and character of the paper will be changed and greatly improved. Indeed it is proposed to issue a weekly sheet of much higher pretentions to literary character and typographical execution, than any that has yet been put forth in Philadelphia to be called 'Neal's Saturday Gazette and Ladies Literary Museum,' will be ssued on the 28th of October, 1846, and will combine all the advantages of the present weeklies with many improvements and additions beyond their reach. It will be printed with new and elegant type upon a very splendid paper, such as is used in the finest book work. The principal editor, Mr. Joseph C. Neal, late of 'The Pennsylvanian,' has well, d served reputation, the country over, as a humorous writer of unrivalled abilities. He has been pronounced by a distinguished critic, superior to Charles Dickens in all that constitutes genuine merit as a comic writer, a keen soberous of the ludicrous, and this opinion has been endorsed by the tens of thousands of his countrymen who have read his Sketches. Nor are his talents confined to one style of writing. All who have read his editorials know at once a graceful liveliness and good humor, graces his productions, yet. when occassion requires he holds a pen fearless and powerful to lash abuses, to expose vice or to defend the right. As a sound thinker, a man familiar with the wants of the people, practically and of choice an industrious writer, and as journalist known and respected for eminent abilities and gentlemanly bearing, the publishers think that in this editor, they have made choice of no common man, they feel assured that he will be accordingly welcomed by the American press from Maine to Georgia.

To render the paper in every respect what it should be, Mr. Neal has retired from all other connection with the press, and will devote the full force of his talent, industry and experience to the columns of the Saturday Gazette, which, powerfully backed as he will be by the ablest writers of the day, cannot fail to place the new enterprise far beyond the reach of competition, by concentraing upon it an amount of literary force which has never before been similarly brought together on this side of the Atlantic.

There is still another department in which the Gazette and Ladie's Museum will differ from other weekly papers. The fourth page will be edited by a lady of eminent talents.

Sect or party will be unknown to the columns. Literary Criticism, news, both foreign and domestic.

NEW PROSPECTUS

Great Increase of Circulation.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Steadily and Rapidly Increasing.

It has been the design of the publishers of the Post (and if they may believe the testimony of many witnesses, it is one in which they have already succeeded) to make the Saturday Evening Post beyond all contradiction the in America. No other paper has such a talented corps of regular contributors as will be seen when we mention the names of T S Arthur, Esq Grace Greenwood, Mrs E F Ellet, Mrs C H Butler, Mrs. Mary Noel MacDonald, F F F Helen W Irving Anna Fleming, Lydia Jane Pierson, Henry Hartman, Mary Davenant, T Hempstead Henry Morford D L Routh &c &c. In addition to the productions of these writers, we are studious in selecting for our columns the best articles in the Foreign and domestic Magazines.

The Agricultural department of the Post is carefully filled with the most interesting articles the appear in the various Agricultural journals,

The Merchantile Department.

Every week we furnish our readers with an accurate account of the condition of the Philadelphia Markets—the Prices and sales of country Produce, and the cattle Market. Our bank note List is also carefully corrected weekly, and the prices of various stocks given. Careful Attention will be given to this impottant Department of the Paper, to make it accurate and Reliable.

Portraits and Pictures.

Portraits of distinguished men and pictures of remarkable places and events are among the attraction of the Post. And we endeavor always to have some such embellisment in our columns to add to their vrriety and beauty.

The Fireside Friend.

We shall thus endeavor to maintain in the future, the proud title the post has acquired of being peculiarly a family paper and the fire side friend—the friend also of Morality, virtue, Public improvement and National advancement.

NO OLD REPRINT

The post is no second hand edition of a daily paper. All its matter is prepared expressly for it, and it alone—and it is evident that this is the only mode in which a really good weekly paper can be made.

Subscriptions.

Our subsciption price is as low as any really good original paper, not a mere reprint can be afforded—and as low as that of any other paper, (not a reprint) of the same size and appearance in the coutry, in most cases lower. The price is for single copies, two dollars per annum, in advance: For $5 in advance one copy will be sent three years.

For three dollars one copy of the Saturday Evening post, and one copy of sears Pictorial Family Magazine, will be sent one year each.

For five Dollars one copy of the saturday Evening post, one copy of grahams Magazine, and one copy of Sears Pictorial Family Magazine.
